A WARM WELCOME SET THE YEAR'S PACE

Dear Friends of LVC:

First years are always marked with novelty. And so it was for my family and me.

This past year has been a daily discovery of the privilege to being a part of our great Lebanon Valley family. Beginning with a cherry pie that arrived on the first day in our new home, through the Inaugural Convocation, with the help of our new-found friends, Janice and I embarked on our new life buoyed by a warmth and welcome for which we are most grateful.

It is a pleasure to report that the 1996-97 academic year was another of successful progress for Lebanon Valley College. My greatest concern was that the momentum of the recent years not be lost. I'm happy to announce it most assuredly was not.

Our institution is in sound financial condition. Enrollment of 1,182 full-time undergraduate students was the highest in LVC history. Operating income of $28.8 million against expenses of $28.1 million generated a surplus of $690,000 which has been reinvested in facilities. Endowment stood at $22.8 million on June 30, 1997, thanks to careful investment and a number of major gifts and bequests.

Beyond the pleasant experience of meeting the LVC family, the year was also one of looking ahead. Indeed strategic planning, under the leadership of Trustee Dr. Ross Fasick '55, was a major focus of the office of the president. Several aspects of the planning process suggested directions LVC might take.

◆ As the policy of awarding achievement scholarships to top-ranked high school students continued to attract more students, the strategic planning group began to look at future enrollment goals. Accordingly, an enrollment goal of 1,345 full-time undergraduates has been set for the year 2000, and planners are looking at what economies of scale can be achieved beyond that level.

◆ Academic initiatives during the year took us into an examination of both curricular and co-curricular programs to strengthen the academic program and also to project LVC into additional student markets. The Master of Science in Education program, which was opened this year, is just one academic initiative, and a commitment to varsity ice hockey for the next academic year is representative of such a co-curricular program.

◆ In the academic area, continued emphasis on the out-of-class support students need for individual success resulted in the establishment of a Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning to strengthen students' learning skills.

◆ The Middle States Association, our accrediting body, called for a self-study based on the five-year interval since its last review. That study was completed with the Association applauding our results.

DENNIS CREWS

While LVC has made major progress in the facilities area, we must plan for enrollment growth and a campus that compares well with other institutions our size. So it was natural when the college was offered a 42-acre tract of land north of the railroad, that possibility suggested a fuller look at all options. Accordingly, a new north campus concept plan for more than 100 acres of athletic fields, ponds and wetlands, student residences and parking areas was created by the college's architects. The new baseball, field hockey and soccer fields are under development for anticipated use in 1998-99.

One of the best traditions, I discovered during the year, is the close relationship Lebanon Valley has with its community. Two programs—the Lebanon Valley Education Partnership (LVEP) and the Founders Day Award—have special significance. Started seven years ago with 6th graders in the Lebanon City schools, the LVEP encourages disadvantaged students, who might not consider college, to acquire the skills and academic record needed for higher education. It was a pleasure for all who participated in that program to see the first three students enroll at LVC this past year, while 18 others enrolled in colleges across America. In the other tradition, LVC recognizes through the Founders Day program a person who has contributed significantly to life and living in our region. This past year, Allen "Skip" Hicks, restorer, owner and manager of the Allen Theatre on Main Street in Annville, received the 1997 Founder's Day Award. He not only has a successful business enterprise, he cooperates fully with the college's public events and film series programs.

This year was also one of transition in other ways. Tom Reinhart '58 announced his decision to step down as chair of the Board of Trustees. Tom presided over the renaissance of Lebanon Valley College since 1989, and will continue as a member of the board and the executive committee. I look forward to working with Ross Fasick, who succeeds Tom as chair of the trustees. In another area, Dick Charles, vice president for Advancement since 1988, retired on June 30. Deborah A. Read, who recently served as director of university development for the University of Maryland, has taken that post.

Finally, I wish to thank everyone who made the Inaugural Convocation on October 12, 1996, a great success for Lebanon Valley College. Ninety colleges and universities, as well as learned societies and professional associations, sent representatives to participate in this celebration of education and of our academic traditions. In all, well over 800 college friends participated that day, which began with an appropriately traditional academic procession and concluded with fireworks at the Arnold Sports Complex.

My congratulations to the members of the college family whose successes are reported in this publication, and my gratitude to the thousands of alumni and other friends whose gifts of time, talent and treasure have made this past year a significant one for Lebanon Valley College.

G. David Pollick
President

TALKING ABOUT TRANSITION

Dr. Ross W. Fasick '55, Lebanon Valley's new Board of Trustees chair, sat down recently to talk with Thomas C. Reinhart '58, who in May 1997 stepped down as chair after eight years. They discussed the college's progress over that time period, as well as Lebanon Valley's future prospects. Fasick, who joined the board in 1992, is a retired senior vice president of E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. and lives in Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania. Reinhart, who remains on the board, is a business entrepreneur in Reading, Pennsylvania. Judy Pehrson, executive director of college relations and editor of The Valley, served as moderator.

Pehrson: This last year has been a key one for the college. Not only has a transition been made between presidents, from John A. Synodinos to G. David Pollick, but we've also had a change in leadership for the Board of Trustees. How well do you think that the college has handled these two important transitions?

Reinhart: Well, Ross has been in charge of the most recent one, and I'm going to pass the ball to him and let him answer that question because he was chair of the Strategic Planning Committee and chair of the Presidential Search Committee that hired Dave Pollick.

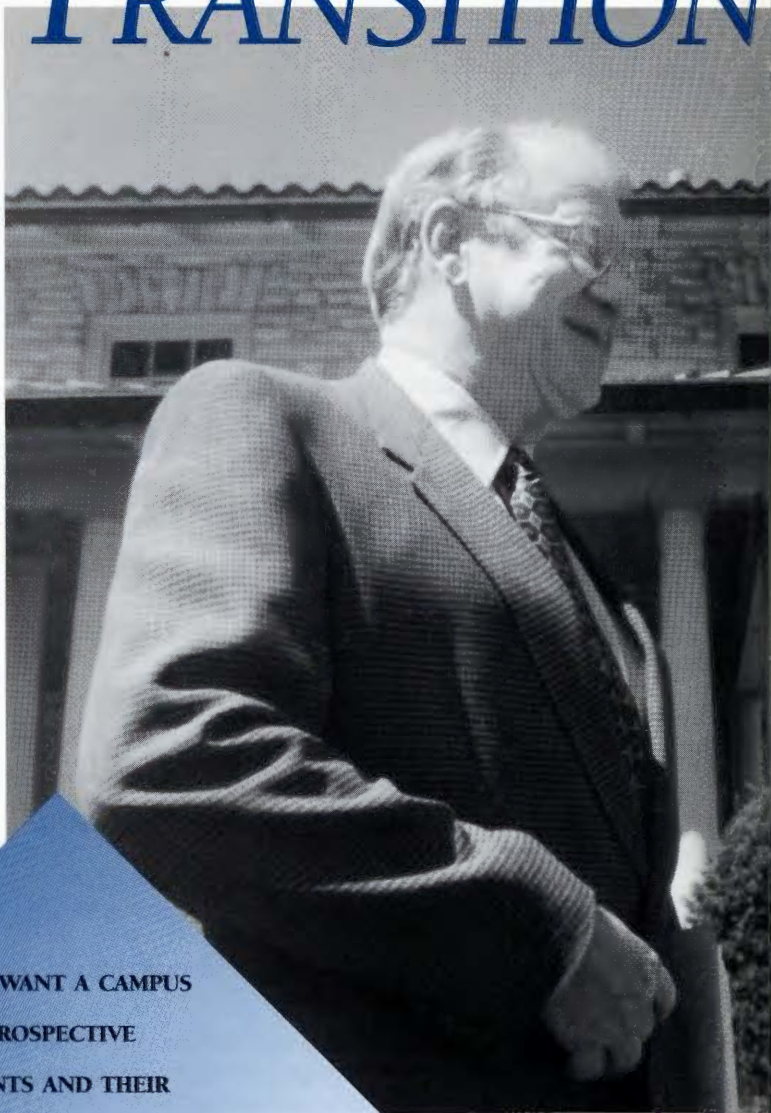

Fasick: You have to talk separately about the presidential transition and the board transition. The presidential transition, I believe, has gone exceptionally well. I think that speaks for the caliber of the two individuals involved. They quickly developed a rapport, a fondness and a high level of respect for one another. In fact, I think it would be fair to say that they are close friends. I don't see how that transition could have gone much better than it has. President Pollick hit the ground running in July 1996 and we never lost a step. Having a strong staff in place was a great help, and the outgoing president did everything he could to make the transition smooth. That's my perspective.

Reinhart: I think proof positive of what Ross has just said is that Dave Pollick has recommended that John Synodinos be appointed to the board. That is an unusual step, and we are delighted.

Fasick: As far as the board transition, I think it's just too early to really make an assessment. I am very comfortable at this time. I don't know of a single issue where Tom and I have a wide difference of opinion. There obviously will be some, but I am unaware at the present time of any such issues. Tom and I have different backgrounds but very similar interests and values. Tom is truly an entrepreneur, and my background is in industry, so we're bound to be coming from a little different position on some issues, but I can't tell you what they are at this point. We have a fine board with trustees focused on what is best for Lebanon Valley College. Many of our trustees work incredibly hard on behalf of the college and make all sorts of important contributions.

Reinhart: Well, obviously, one of the strengths that Ross brings to the chairmanship is the background gained from many years with DuPont. When we asked Ross to join the board a number of years ago, we recognized that background, and that's why Ross has chaired the Strategic Planning Committee and Ross has, as indicated earlier, chaired the Presidential Search Committee.

Pehrson: Do you anticipate any changes in the board, its role or procedures?

"ALL WE DO IS IN SUPPORT OF STUDENTS AND GEARED TO THE EDUCATION OF THE WHOLE PERSON, IN AND OUT OF THE CLASSROOM."

—THOMAS C. REINHART '58

Pehrson: What do you both see as some of the major accomplishments of the board during Tom's tenure?

Fasick: One of the major contributions made by Tom's administration when John Synodinos was president was a dramatic reduction in the size of the Board of Trustees. There were 60 members when John and Tom took over eight years ago, and we're down to about 30 now, which is much more manageable and efficient.

Reinhart: I would agree with Ross that the reorganization of the board probably is one of the most important things that took place while I was chairman. Tied directly to that are the new people we brought onto the board based on their qualifications to fill some voids in areas that fall under board responsibility. Specifically, having Ross, and Kathy Bishop, in strategic planning based on their experience, and Darwin Glick in advancement based on his background, has been helpful. Gene Geesey, who chairs the Facilities Committee, is another prime example. Gene's entire work history and background are in contracting, insurance and bonding. So we brought people into positions of responsibility who in their jobs or vocations have experience that they bring to the party, and it's working well.

I'm also proud of the growth that has occurred. In 1989-90, the college's budget was about $14 million a year. The budget this year is in excess of $30 million. Now that obviously ties into increased numbers of students, staff and facilities. However, I guess the thing I'm probably as proud of as anything is that we're financially in the black. We're stable.

Fasick: The development area also geared up during Tom and John's regime. Another thing that I think is exceedingly important was the institutionalization of strategic planning. The first strategic plan was put together and published in 1991. It was a good plan, but it was very simple, uncomplicated and relatively unstructured. The plan that we put together and published in 1995 was really an add-on. There wasn't much new or particularly different, but it was in a more detailed format. The process that was followed and, hopefully, institutionalized, forced us to look at and think more about the environment—both the external environment and what that's going to do to us, and the changes in the internal environment that are going to impact the way the college operates and moves forward. So I feel the strategic planning process was one of the prime accomplishments, although there were many others during the previous eight-year period.

For example, you have the facilities that have been put in place—particularly the library and the general upgrading of the campus that took place. That will be an on-going thrust—we want a campus that prospective students and their parents look at and say, "Wow!" President Pollick has made his presence felt very quickly in this area.

Reinhart: An issue that Ross and I have talked about is the current retirement policy, which at present is for board members to leave at age 70 or soon thereafter. During the last two or three years we've lost some very good, very talented board members simply because they hit that age 70 mark. We're going to look at that issue.

Fasick: I think we have to look at it. There is an obvious up side to having people remain beyond age 70. Looking at the bigger picture, there is also some down side to changing. We are going to have to look at both sides very carefully.

Reinhart: The good side of the current retirement policy is that you create openings for new people and new blood.

Fasick: And the size of the board is much more controllable. We had a very large board at one time a few years back, and I'm told it was a much more cumbersome process to get things done. As for the role of the board, that is well-defined and should not change. As for procedures, we will continue to look at everything we do in all areas. Undoubtedly there are things we can do better.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY CHRIS KNIGHT

Reinhart: But it takes ongoing increased dollars to maintain the facilities put into place. A perfect example is the Garber Science Center, which was constructed 15 years ago and today is very costly to maintain, primarily because we skimped during the construction. Frankly, it's now out of date. We have a first-class science faculty. You give them a facility that is not first-class and you expect them to go out and help recruit academically superior students, and that's not the way the game is supposed to be played. So one of the things in the thinking process is a brand new, state-of-the-art science facility.

There are also other things on the horizon. For example, we just purchased 42-plus acres of land, east of the current athletic complex, that we intend to develop. And as Ross and I drove into Kreiderheim today, we noticed that workers are already clearing the property we are going to develop on the west side of Route 934.

All we do is in support of students and geared to the education of the whole person, in and out of the classroom. Implementation of the strategic plan will cost a lot of dollars, and my primary concern is the source of funding. We will need to identify, cultivate and develop new sources of revenue.

Fasick: I think over the past few years the intensity of our marketing effort has increased and improved dramatically. But to really get to where we need to be competitively, it's going to have to get even better. It is not necessarily a weakness now, but if we want to grow according to our plans, we're going to have to do more than we've done in the past. That is true of the campus appearance as well. The kids who came to Lebanon Valley to look at the campus five years ago were looking at something that we were all proud of, but compared to many of our frame-of-reference institutions we were not competitive. While over the last five years the quality of our campus has improved dramatically, we have work to do. There is a lot going on as we speak.

Pehrson: Where are we in the planning process for accomplishing these goals and projects that you are talking about?

Fasick: As I said earlier, the 1991 strategic plan was a good one, but the 1995 plan was, I think, better in the sense that it was in a different format, a more detailed format, and tried to take a closer look at how the college was being impacted by the changing environment. Today we have a Strategic Planning Review Committee, which twice a year looks at the question, Are we on track? Are we accomplishing—or moving toward accomplishing—the goals that are represented by our strategies? We have made one major change this year, and that is the growth strategy. For a lot of different reasons it was felt that we needed to grow at 3 or 4 percent per year instead of 1 or 2 percent. The strategic plan is a living document. It will be changed as needed. At this particular time, I believe it is in pretty good shape.

Reinhart: I agree.

Fasick: And about every five years we ought to take the newest plan and scrutinize it very, very carefully, and ask ourselves the question,

Are these strategies consistent with what is happening around us? Evaluation of the plan is a continuous process, but periodically we'll want to do a complete review. Kathy Bishop is the current chair of the Strategic Plan Review Committee. Her committee has about a dozen people with a lot of experience in the planning area. It has several faculty members, administrators, trustees, a student and the president of the Alumni Association, so it is very representative. Strategic planning is a part of our life from this point on, and changes in strategy will almost always be dictated by things that are happening in the environment, things that we have little or no control over, so we're going to have to adapt quickly to stay on top.

Pehrson: What are some of these things we have no control over that require adaptation?

Fasick: Well, changing expectations of our "customers." Today, students and prospective students and their parents expect them to go to college and graduate with good job prospects.

Five years ago, colleges worried less about meeting those specific expectations of students or their parents, but as the cost has risen, so has the expectation of what a family gets for its investment. At one time, parents were happy to have their child get a good college education, whatever that meant. Today, they expect a good education and a good-paying job as a result of that investment.

And that seems only reasonable. From the employers' perspective, change also is occurring. We must deal effectively with both.

Reinhart: And, Judy, here is where we get into the area I have discussed regularly with our admission people. We need to be in the position to answer the question, Why should my son or daughter attend Lebanon Valley College? Now we have the answer to that, especially as it relates to competing with other independent liberal arts colleges. Our scholarship program makes us more affordable than many of our competitor schools. The answer gets a little tougher, however, when you are competing with the state institutions, where the cost to attend is appreciably less to that family than attending a private institution. It's less, of course, because state institutions are subsidized by government.

However, because of our low faculty-student ratio, we are able to provide the individual support to students that is so important to both academic and personal growth.

Another very important response is that our new four-year graduation policy guarantees, with certain provisos, that students will be able to graduate from LVC in four years. If a student cannot complete requirements in four full academic years because of the unavailability of required courses, the college will provide free tuition for those courses. That's a guarantee that no state school can match.

Fasick: Another area where change has taken place is the academic majors or the curriculum that people are looking for today. In many cases, the curriculum is quite different from what it was 10 years ago. The whole health-care area is one that many colleges are focusing on today. And if you look at the forecasts of where the jobs are going to be 10 or 20 years from now, the health-care area is high on the list. We don't offer much in that particular area right now. Maybe we should. I think these kinds of questions all need to be asked.

Also, it's difficult for some people to relate a liberal arts education to going out and getting a desirable job in industry, academia or wherever. These are all changing trends that we need to learn to deal with and we need to adopt strategies and change them if necessary in order to remain competitive. And today, unless you're striving to be the very best, you are not likely to improve very much, and if you aren't improving in today's competitive environment, you're very likely to be losing position. So all of those things support the need for intense focus on strategic planning and the ability to adapt in a timely manner.

Reinhart: Another area of change is the increasing internationalization of campuses. One of the areas that President Pollick is particularly strong in is his experience and interest in international programs. This year we will have 30 percent more students overseas than we did last year, and that also is an important part of this strategic plan to boost this international experience. I personally think it's a great idea and would like to see every student spend a semester overseas—not only students, but faculty as well. That's part of what the liberal arts are all about, in my opinion.

Fasick: I believe down the road—I'm talking a period of five to 10 years—we'll have several hundred students involved in international study, including foreign students studying here and our students studying in foreign countries.

Reinhart: And that's compared to about 35 or 40 today. That has an important purpose from a strategic planning point of view. If we're sending more students overseas than we're getting back here, it frees up dorm beds and classroom space generally, and takes pressure off these facilities. It's a way to grow without spending a lot of investment dollars.

Fasick: Right now, more of our students are going abroad than foreign students are coming here.

Pehrson: Given some of the changes you've mentioned, what do you think the campus will look like in five or 10 years?

Fasick: Well, first of all, I think our size is going to be quite different from what it is today. I believe in a period of five years, we'll have between 1,300 and 1,400 full-time students versus 1,150 today, and in 10 years we'll have between 1,700 and 1,800 full-time students. I believe we'll also have a much more diverse campus community. Part of that diversity will be this broader international program we've been talking about, but we also will have a much larger minority representation among students, faculty and staff. I think we're going to have a much improved competitive position among similar colleges, and I think that has to happen through some of these things that we talked about a little earlier and more intense marketing of our strengths. We are good. We have a lot of things to sell. We have a lot of areas where we have made great improvement, but we have not yet maximized our selling effort.

Reinhart: I keep saying, Ross—and maybe this is the salesman in me—that we are, as an institution, better than we sometimes think we are, but not as good as we can be.

Fasick: Nor as good as we need to be. We are going to need to be substantially better than we are today in that five-year or 10-year period down the road in order to be considered one of the best medium-sized liberal arts institutions. I think five years from now we'll have a more interesting, in-demand curriculum. This past year there were some changes that have enabled us to expand our curriculum. I think there will be additional changes over the next five years that are going to make us more appealing to high school seniors or students transferring in from other colleges. I think that's absolutely essential.

Pehrson: What are some of the curricular changes that have occurred recently?

Fasick: Well, we now have a master's degree in science. There are other things also being considered that are still at the faculty committee level, but the fact of the matter is that we're going to have to do some of the things that we've not done up to this point in time.

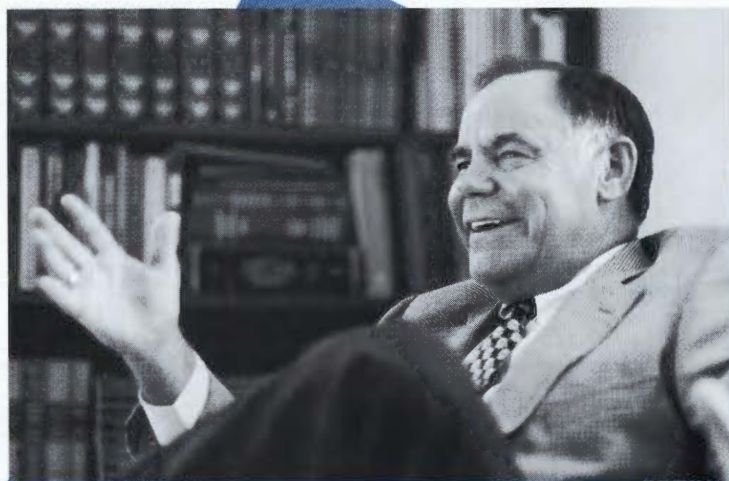

Reinhart: We will need the leadership and cooperation of the faculty, too—not only their understanding, but their full support of any change as it relates to curriculum, programs and the like. But I think our faculty understand and recognize the need for change, not just for the sake of change, but change for a lot of the reasons that Ross has mentioned. We are at a point where we don't have any choice if we're going to compete in today's environment and, you know, that's really what board responsibility is.

Fasick: Competition isn't always a word that members of academia like to deal with, but higher education has become a highly competitive business. That's another word that isn't always greeted with a lot of enthusiasm—business. But you must be a leader, or you're going to be a follower, which means you're going to fail eventually.

Reinhart: We have a product to sell. We have improved the product. We think it's very competitively priced, but it has to continue to get better because our competitors' products will also get better.

Fasick: For example, our Achievement Scholarship program approach was unique for a few years, and then other colleges, in order to remain competitive, started picking it up. We're going to be faced with that every time we do something that is unique and effective. The uniqueness will be short-lived. Now, having said all that, I do believe that in that five-to-10-year period ahead, we can have a broader financial comfort zone than we have today. We have a growth strategy that is very reasonable and that we believe will be accomplished and bolster our financial stability. We have another strong leader in President Pollick, and an outstanding administrative team. We believe our faculty and trustee groups are second to none, and we have a very supportive alumni group and friends of our college. I see a very bright future for LVC.

MESSAGE FROM THE ADVANCEMENT CHAIR

Dear LVC Friends:

Most of you reading this column will know that the Advancement Office—composed of the offices of Alumni Programs, College Relations and Development—is charged to “advance” the cause of Lebanon Valley College with those beyond the campus: alumni and other friends, business and foundations, prospective students and the public at large.

It is a considerable pleasure to report that, during the 1996-97 year, all the offices within Advancement recorded substantial—in some cases record—progress on behalf of LVC.

Gifts to Lebanon Valley College are reported in detail beginning on page 10, but a number of new records were set this year and are worth highlighting here:

- ◆ Private cash giving, $4,004,967, increased 3 percent and was a new record.
- ◆ 5,190 friends and organizations made gifts, an 8.5 percent increase from the previous year and also a new record.
- ◆ Gifts from all sources—private, public and gifts in kind—totaled $4,557,625 and, trailing last year by a scant .7 percent, represented the second highest level on record.
- ◆ LVC was one of three small colleges nationally to receive a coveted 1997 Circle of Excellence in Educational Fund Raising Award from CASE, the national organization for education advancement professionals. In fact, this was the second year for LVC to be so cited by CASE.

The arrival of President G. David Pollick provided opportunities for the college to reach out to many valued constituencies. In all, more than 20 “Meet Dr. and Mrs. Pollick” receptions, breakfasts and dinners were held on campus, locally and in the mid-Atlantic region. More than 1,100 friends attended these functions, which were arranged by the Alumni Programs and Development offices and promoted by College Relations. Additionally, more than 1,000 guests and delegates from other colleges and universities attended events in connection with the October 12, 1996, Inauguration of David Pollick as the 16th president of Lebanon Valley College.

Other Advancement programming highlights of the year included:

Alumni Programs: Major changes in volunteer and staff personnel occurred as Dr. Kristen Angstadt '74 became president of the Alumni Association and Shanna Adler succeeded Diane Wenger '92 as director of Alumni Programs.

Noteworthy alumni happenings included eight receptions for the new college president, five other off-campus chapter events and sports outings, the annual bus trip to New York City and keeping up with classmates through The Valley. The year wound up with a gala Alumni Weekend and Spring Arts Festival, where alumni from nine reunion classes renewed friendships and participated in the festive events. In June, the Alumni Hostel attracted 37 alumni and family members to enjoy an enriching educational experience sponsored by their alma mater.

And LVC pride is “on the road” through the LVC license plate. Nearly 400 alumni and other friends display this official Commonwealth of Pennsylvania license tag. LVC tags are still available, and orders may be placed by contacting the Alumni Programs Office (800-ALUM-LVC).

During this year, the LVC Alumni Association began offering a credit card, available through MBNA Bank. Alumni and other friends, staff and students may apply for the card by contacting Alumni Programs. The credit card carries many benefits and returns a small portion of each purchase to the college.

College Relations: Again this year, through College Relations contacts, LVC was featured nationally in USA Today, The Chronicle of Higher Education and many other publications across the country. In its special college edition, U.S. News & World Report cited LVC as an excellent value, rating the college 14th among 240 private colleges in the northern United States.

The Office of Publications continued its winning ways as several brochures and posters earned awards from Women in Communication, including a first place for the “Timeless Traditions” annual fund case statement, and recognition for the colorful “Live at Lebanon Valley” calendar of events. The Valley magazine was also cited for consistent excellence.

A sports Boosters newsletter was introduced this year in cooperation with the Office of Athletics and the Development Office. Sports fans received detailed accounts of fall, winter and spring athletics and also were invited to support the sports program.

Development: In the first “post-TOWARD 2001 Campaign year,” this office produced outstanding financial results as mentioned above, despite a number of staff changes. Director of Development Ellen Arnold, CFRE resigned in mid-year and Carolyn Lauver assumed temporary responsibilities for that post in addition to annual giving. Pam Lambert was appointed acting assistant director of annual giving, replacing Shanna Adler.

Advancement Committee Chair Darwin G. Glick '58 (left) and Bruce Rismiller '59, Alumni Annual Fund chair, admire the 1997 Circle of Excellence in Educational Fund Raising Award from CASE. The college was one of only three small colleges in the nation to receive the award.

Last year was a banner year for endowed faculty chairs. The Vernon and Doris Bishop Distinguished Chair in Chemistry was formally dedicated in November, with Dr. Richard Cornelius named as the first holder of the chair. In April the Drs. Clark and Edna Carmean '59 pledged a fully endowed chair in music and funded it with a charitable gift annuity. In response, the trustees established the Carmean Chair at their May meeting. LVC is most grateful to Vernon Bishop and to Clark and Edna Carmean for their leadership, vision and generosity.

The Lebanon Valley Education Partnership (LVEP) with the Lebanon School District held its annual golf tournament, chaired by Donald Leshner. The LVEP program helps and encourages able but disadvantaged high school students to prepare for college. A total of $275,000 has been contributed during the eight years of the LVEP program and golf tournament.

As recorded on page 10, the Thomas Rhys Vickroy Society moved ahead with 385 individual and organizational members, and the President's Circle held its first recognition event this spring with a black-tie evening of dining and dancing. Two new circles were added to the college's recognition program during the year: the Laureate Society (see page 11) will honor those individuals and organizations whose total giving to LVC has surpassed the $1-million-dollar level. The GOLD Circle (Graduates Of Last Decade) will encourage younger alumni to participate in the Vickroy Society.

The Office of Planned Giving had an impressive year with a total of $2,170,902 in commitments. Planned giving assists donors in making gifts to LVC through trusts, bequests, charitable gift annuities and scholarships, and is a primary avenue for friends of the college to help build the endowment.

To the members of the Advancement Committee and the other volunteers who helped LVC so mightily, I offer my warmest appreciation. I would especially note the work of Bruce Rismiller '59, who chaired the Alumni Annual Fund; Lee Glowacki, who led the Business Fund; Allen "Skip" Hicks, who headed up the Friends effort; Dr. Sidney Pollack, who led the Faculty and Staff solicitation; and John and Carol Byers P'97, who co-chaired the Parents Council.

The 1996-97 year has indeed been successful, and I conclude with warmest thanks to our dedicated Advancement staff. Though buffeted by personnel changes, staff leaves of absence and other challenges, they have been an outstanding team for LVC as shown throughout this report. We send good wishes to Dick Charles, now vice president emeritus. We welcome Deborah A. Read as vice president and look forward to working together to forge the next chapter in advancing Lebanon Valley College.

LVC exists solely to provide an outstanding education for our students. So—saving the best for last—and on behalf of our students, my heartfelt thanks to our generous benefactors listed in this report. It is your help and encouragement that make this college great.

Sincerely,

Darwin G. Glick

DENNIS CREWS

ALL-AMERICAN BOY

In March, 380 Division III basketball coaches voted sophomore Andy Panko a first-team All-American. Panko also became the college's first basketball player to top 1,000 points in the first two years of play. Numerous basketball publications have named him to their All-American teams, and he was chosen as the ECAC Southern Division Co-Player of the Year and the MAC Commonwealth League's Most Valuable Player. He is shown here with basketball coach Brad McAlester.

"Art deals with things forever incapable of definition that belong to love, beauty, joy and worship; the shapes, powers and glory of which are forever building, unbuilding, rebuilding in each man's soul, and in the soul of the whole world."

Lebanon Valley Education Partnership

The Lebanon Valley Education Partnership is a program carried out with the Lebanon School District that encourages young people to consider attending college. The three-part program familiarizes students with the college environment, identifies those qualified to pursue a college education and provides scholarship funds if they should choose Lebanon Valley.

Each September for the past seven years, friends of the college and representatives from local industries have participated in a golf outing at the Lebanon Country Club. The tournament has raised over $275,000 for scholarship assistance. The honorary chair each year has been Lebanon native Sam Bowie, former center for the Los Angeles Lakers.

PROFITABLE PARTNERSHIP

Lebanon businessman Don Leshner (center) has been a driving force behind the Annual Achievement Challenge Golf Tournament, which in 1996 raised $44,800 in scholarships. The golf outing is the major fund-raiser for the Lebanon Valley Education Partnership, a cooperative effort between the college and the Lebanon School District to encourage disadvantaged students to stay in school and go on to college. Since its inception in 1990, the tournament has raised over $275,000 and has netted $225,000. Leshner is shown here with Kenneth Horst and Jennissa Lapp, two of the Partnership students who enrolled in Lebanon Valley College last year.

Volunteers

Planned Giving

The Honors Society

The Honors Society of Lebanon Valley College was established on March 15, 1987, to recognize alumni and friends who have planned for the future by naming the college in their will as a beneficiary for $10,000 or more, or by purchasing a charitable gift annuity, establishing a charitable remainder trust or giving real estate or insurance policies to the college. This group has designated over $5,000,000 for future buildings, scholarships and endowment to assure the well-being of Lebanon Valley College.
